Publication date: 2002

Conversations between the psychiatrist Ferdière, who in 1943 brought Artaud from the occupied Paris to Rodez, and the philosopher Sylvère Lotringer. Disclosures and corrections of the Case Artaud in an investigative, analytically led discussion about the situation in psychiatry in France during the war and post-war period. The conversation also covers the electric shock therapy Artaud was treated with in Rodez, and the incredible literary and artistic burst productivity of Artaud during his last years of life. Fresh perspectives on the Affair Artaud.
